Professional Experience

Lisa Henderson is a Senior Consultant at CBRE, responsible for leading and developing successful Workplace Strategy and Change Management consulting projects for clients across Canada. She is passionate about wellness and sustainable practices, providing innovative space recommendations that look to improve employee wellbeing, and the organization’s longevity.

An experienced corporate communicator and process strategist, Lisa uses a creative and strategic approach to finding solutions that enhance employee performance and experience. Lisa will apply leading research and data to make recommendations that allow your organization to make smart real estate, workplace and people decisions.

With over 12 years of commercial interiors experience, Lisa has built strong working relationships and trust with clients. Lisa has advised and executed on furniture, architectural and flooring projects across a variety of segments and project scopes. A worldwide trend hunter, Lisa has traveled and trained at leading product manufacturing facilities and design conferences to scout out material and design innovations for interiors and architecture.

Lisa started her career as the Marketing Communications Manager for a Best In Class furniture dealer. There she jumped into producing competitive global bid proposals, implementing new technologies and communication strategies. She went on to advise the architecture and design community on innovative furniture and interior product applications. Most recently, Lisa worked for a leading global manufacturer in the flooring industry, establishing new accounts and growing market segments.
